In the Carrier market, the SmartNode has become a preferred advanced CPE and the SmartNode 10100 expands the portfolio with a high traffic CPE.. It is critical for service providers to be able to rapidly establish new interconnections without having to always deploy new devices.. Beside the capital savings achieved by purchasing less units of equipment, system density also provides operational cost savings in the form of reduced co-location fees as well as lower power and cooling costs.. For many, if not most, service providers, the payoff from reducing energy use can be particularly impressive; typically, for every watt of power required to operate a device, another watt is required to cool it.. In addition, the SmartNode 10100 expands our reach onto the Carrier as the Media Gateway is a key component for applications at the Carrier operational level as well as in connecting advanced value-added services.
